NANONOVELS

“a dazzling
storyteller”

Jules Horne

Ever suffered from writer's block?

Jules Horne had a chronic form of the condition, known as writer's lock. Could a scientific experiment be the answer? She decided to write A STORY A DAY. IN FIVE MINUTES.

150 particle fictions, prose poems and nanodramas about eagles, trolls, Oulipo, Taylor's Theorem, Walden, sylosis, dogs, bumfles, leeches, toasted diamonds, and other unexpected findings from an imaginative collision between a bookshelf, the internet, and a human mind.

About the Author:

JULES HORNE is a playwright and fiction writer from the Scottish Borders. Her plays have been broadcast on BBC Radio and won two Edinburgh Festival Fringe Firsts, and she has won the RL Stevenson Award for her fiction. She is a former BBC journalist, and studied German and French at Oxford University.

Sales and Marketing Highlights:

- Funny and thought-provoking mind-bites by award-winning Scottish writer
- Playful literary treasure-hunt in the spirit of Oulipo
- Self-help for writers when the muse goes on strike
