

WRAPPED TOWN

“a dazzling storyteller”

Jules Horne

Dolly the sheep is anointed by angels, a girl rugby-tackles Scottish country dancers, an old horse bequeaths its bones, an artist wraps an entire small town...

Set in the Scottish Borders, these delightfully dark and funny stories showcase the quirky imagination of an exuberant voice in Scottish fiction.

About the Author:

JULES HORNE is a playwright and fiction writer from the Scottish Borders. Her plays have been broadcast on BBC Radio and won two Edinburgh Festival Fringe Firsts, and she has won the RL Stevenson Award for her fiction. She is a former BBC journalist, and studied German and French at Oxford University.
